DEPOPULATION OF FRANCE. A correspondent in L'Explorateur calls attention to some remarkable facts in reference to the population of France. The writer says:-"The impotency of our race shows itself daily in many ways. We are stationary, while all surrounding nations are spreading themselves | Chinese Imperial Loan-£106. out and adding to their territory. Thus, it has been calculated, on the basis of the proportion of births and deaths, in what time the various European countries doubles their population, and the following are the results: - Norway, 51 yeurs; Austria, 62; England, 63; Denmark. 73; Sweden, 89; Germany, 98; and France, 934 years! Moreover, this last figure, hamiliating as it is, places us in a somewhat better light hun we really deserve, for France receives yearly a certain number of immigrants, who, attracted by the pleasant climate and the agreeable manners of the people, settle among us and becomein time French families: they escape, as far as bey can at least, from the law which other wise prevails. It is, then, by the number of French youths to whom this law applies that we are able to form an estimate of the really national population. The following are the numbers of Frenchmen who in recent years have resched the age of 20 years:-In 1873, 303,810; in 1874, Tai Loongeto local trader, 296,204; in 1875, 283,768; in 1876, the number does not exceed 277,000. The comparative steri- Loong to local trader. lity of neurriages is in France un evil peculiar only to those who have possessions, and does not touch those who are without heritage. Artisans, workmen, all who live from day to day, do not dread having a family; the patrimonial inheritance suffers no injury, as it would do in the cases of well-to-do families. But the decline of the French population is not the only injurious result of the forced partition of heritages. There are other evil results, such us the indefinite parcelling out of landed proporty and the ruin of small heritages by law expenses. These evils have become so great that Government is beginning to think of a remedy. May the secondary facts not keep out of sight the main fact of all—the appalling sterility of the French population."

Tojudge by the greater part of the remarks thus selected for the public edification, the interesting veteran must have been one of the feeblest specimens of the British soldier in 1818. The most vivid recollections of his youth that The Times' correspondent has collected relate to the "sufferings" of the then juvenile repruit the one blanket, and finally, the severe labour of bearing the Emperor's body to the grave. A very troublesome and irksome job it appeared to this raw private of the line to belp in currying to their miserable resting-place the remains of the conqueror of Europe. And the Hours Rain...... fact of his having performed gramblingly this most unwelcome duty entitles the senile grumbler, as it seems, in the opinion of his eaclesienstical patron, to ask the public for money-Notwithstanding, however, that the bulk of the communication relates to the private experiences of the interesting veteran, there are a N.E. &c. tew scraps of information as to the habits of his, perhaps, still more interesting prisoner. Every one is a ware that Napoleon in his latter years grew very corpulant, but few probably are prepared to hear an octogenarian declare that "Bony was the futtest man be ever saw." Perhaps the most curious observation made by the English soldier refers to his habit of carry. ing a stick with an iron spud at the end, and registered from 1 to 24, and the quantity of water fallon indicated in "anywhere where he saw a weed, always pulling | inches, tens, and hundreds. it up, anywhere where he went." The demeanour of the captive is described as "sometimes very sulky," and his death attributed immediately to the result of the "orders" sent to him to go and occupy rooms in the new State prison. As for Sir Hudson Lowe, he is rather frankly treuted to the doubtful praise of being "not a WHE Undersigned, Agents for the above. bad gentleman." "Sir Hadson would come riding up with his staff, ving the bell, and sek, Where is Napoleon? 'In his study.' 'Pell him I want him.
